Perché, malgrado la drammatica abbondanza di delitti reali, la nostra società ha bisogno di consumare quotidianamente massicce dosi di crimini letterari, cinematografici e televisivi? Perché il poliziesco si sta imponendo come genere “dominante”? Si tratta di una mera questione commerciale? Di una semplice moda? Alessandro Perissinotto, nella sua duplice veste di sociologo e di scrittore di noir, riflette sul successo della narrativa d'indagine e ne cerca le ragioni profonde in quel diffuso e inappagato desiderio di verità che caratterizza il mondo contemporaneo. In una società sulla quale aleggia perpetuamente lo spettro del complotto, l'investigazione diventa il modello conoscitivo privilegiato, il metodo ultimo per combattere le mistificazioni del potere. E così, non solo il poliziesco impera sugli schermi e tra le pagine dei libri, ma la sua presenza si fa pervasiva anchenella realtà, fino a influenzare le sentenze dei giudici popolari (in quello che viene ormai chiamato il C.S.I. Effect) e fino a condizionare la percezione della scienza medica che, in una visione mediata e massificata, si trasforma in indagine continua, proprio come avviene nella serie Dr. House. Alessandro Perissinotto insegna Teorie e tecniche della comunicazione di massa presso l'Università di Torino. È autore di saggi e di romanzi polizieschi, tra cui ricordiamo L'anno che uccisero Rosetta (1997), La canzone di Colombano (2000), Al mio giudice (2004, Premio Grinzane Cavour 2005), Una piccola storia ignobile (2006), Le colpe dei padri (2013), Coordinate d'Oriente (2014). Le sue opere sono tradotte in molti Paesi europei e in Giappone.

Emergenza, rischio e decisione Peter Lang

Multietnicità e multiculturalismo sono due termini ormai entrati a far parte del linguaggio comune. A fronte di tale diffuso utilizzo, tuttavia, si riscontrano sia notevoli incertezze, confusioni e ambiguità in merito al loro significato, sia valutazioni contrastanti. Questo saggio si propone il duplice scopo di chiarificare tali concetti e soprattutto di affrontare i problemi posti dalle società multietniche.(...) Il volume si sofferma in particolare sui diversi tipi di multiculturalismo che pongono la questione del riconoscimento dei diritti collettivi delle minoranze. Tale riconoscimento, a giudizio dell'Autore, deve in ogni caso assicurare il primato dei diritti umani fondamentali necessari per la costruzione di una equilibrata società multietnica.(dal risvolto di copertina).

In tempi di costante accelerazione e di emergenze, in cui ogni decisione richiede la massima tempestività, si assiste a una crescente «deregolamentazione del mercato cognitivo», alla proliferazione di stereotipi, pregiudizi e automatismi mentali. Questi meccanismi, di per sé necessari al funzionamento di una democrazia complessa, sono spesso però anche il terreno fertile di populismi, demagogia e negazionismi di ogni tipo. Innerarity accompagna il lettore in una decostruzione del principio di razionalità moderna, che presiede alla produzione del sapere, rivalutando il ruolo dell'ignoto: non vi è infatti «scoperta scientifica o invenzione tecnologica», ci dice l'autore, «che non porti con sé, come la sua ombra, una nuova mancanza di conoscenza». Ripensare il valore di ciò che non sappiamo e fare i conti con le sue implicazioni è allora il compito più urgente della società contemporanea e della vita, individuale e collettiva.

This book focuses on the specific traits and nature of entrepreneurial human capital and the extent to which it can be stimulated by entrepreneurship education – especially when these activities combine collaborative practices and innovation. It includes a comprehensive collection of articles on how entrepreneurship education can be structured, providing theoretical reflections as well as empirical evidence. As such it contributes to the ongoing debate on the teachability of entrepreneurial skills and the role of innovation and collaboration in the design of educational programs that aim to spread entrepreneurial human capital.

The children of immigrants are growing and embarking on adult life. What are their expectations? With what qualifications do they face the world of work? What is their relationship with their origins? Above all, how does Italian society view them? Through the voices of the protagonists themselves, Second Generations on the Move in Italy: Children of Immigrants Coming of Age offers—by means of an analytical perspective and in constant comparison with the findings of international research—a view of second-generation immigrants' life paths in Italy. The focus at city level contributes to understanding both turning points and key features of the “new Italians” and what major trials they

(and society) will face. The outcome is a picture of a new young generation that will soon challenge Italian society.

"I motivi che danno vita alla Speranza e le forme in cui questa si esprime sono i più vari, ma tutti hanno come prerequisito la volontà inenarrabile di dare senso alla propria esistenza, al proprio soffrire e morire. Per chi è stata importante la mia esistenza? Perché sono nato, vissuto, ho sofferto ed infine sono morto? Le risposte sono i compiti esistenziali di ognuno. [...] È chiaro che per riconquistare le condizioni per vivere la Speranza, dovremo applicare una terapia d'urto, come si fa per le gravi malattie: la restaurazione della persona umana, un'educazione del cuore, per dare un senso al nostro soffrire e al nostro esistere".

This book explores the in-depth relationship between historic-cultural heritage and landscape, urban, and regional planning. It analyzes recent cultural and discipline positions and addresses research to interpret legacy values and the necessity for conservation within the urban setting. It also presents a method that helps urban planners to implement the suggestions, based on extensive knowledge of topographic methods and urban archaeology, to enhance the shaping and planning of the historic and present-day city. A rapid evolution of techniques and methods that provide innovative planning instruments and contribute to conservation projects involving cities and territories is now being witnessed in urban planning. Actors involved in the planning process use an organic and multidisciplinary vision of techniques and methods to understand the relation between the historic-cultural goods and their settlement context. Through urban archaeology it is now possible to orient—in a systematic way—interventions in the historic centers of European cities and document the origin and evolution of the urban shape, to reconcile renewal demand and preservation of ancient heritage.

The discussion of group rights, while always a part of the human rights discourse, has been gaining importance in the past decade. This discussion, which remains fundamental to a full realisation by the international community of its international human rights goals, requires careful analysis and empirical research. The present volume offers a great deal of material for both. It makes a strong case in favour of a multidisciplinary approach to human rights and explores the origins and social, anthropological and legal/political dimensions of human rights and internationally recognised group rights. It explores legal issues such as the reservations to international treaties and methodological questions, including the question of deliberative processes which allow seemingly absolute requirements of human rights to be reconciled with culturally sensitive norms prevailing within various groups. The discussion continues by looking at specific contexts, including the situations of women, school communities, ethnic and linguistic minorities, migrant communities and impoverished groups. The final part of the volume examines the 'state of play' of human rights and group rights in international law, in international relations and in the context of internationally sponsored development policies. Here the authors offer a meticulous and critical presentation of the legal regulation of human rights and group rights and point to numerous weaknesses which continue to exist and which call for additional work by legal thinkers and practitioners.

EU schools are today welcoming more and more pupils from different cultural and ethnic backgrounds, becoming increasingly culturally composite. However, language problems and cultural misunderstandings have the potential to arise from diversity and different cultural and origin affiliations. Some problematic areas concerning both language and educational aspects have emerged with the integration of children from different backgrounds at school. This collection of essays explores different aspects of multicultural and intercultural education, and highlights critical features of multicultural schools in Europe today. It analyses data and new research trends to provide valuable inputs in the field of education strategy, suggesting the review of educational methods and contents to ensure high quality education and training for all children. It offers a wide range of social cases and empirical analyses in both Western and non-Western settings, and will appeal to both educators and the wider public.

Reactualising Emancipation in Contemporary Ethical Discourse Nyberg S.r.l.

In our individualized society we are all artists of life – whether we know it or not, will it or not and like it or not, by decree of society if not by our own choice. In this society we are all expected, rightly or wrongly, to give our lives purpose and form by using our own skills and resources, even if we lack the tools and materials with which artists' studios need to be equipped for the artist's work to be conceived and executed. And we are praised or censured for the results – for what we have managed or failed to accomplish and for what we have achieved and lost. In our liquid modern society we are also taught to believe that the purpose of the art of life should be and can be happiness – though it's not clear what happiness is, the images of a happy state keep changing and the state of happiness remains most of the time something yet-to-be-reached. This new book by Zygmunt Bauman – one of the most original and influential social thinkers writing today – is not a book of designs for the art of life nor a 'how to' book: the construction of a design for life and the way it is pursued is and cannot but be an individual responsibility and individual accomplishment. It is instead a brilliant account of conditions under which our designs-for-life are chosen, of the constraints that might be imposed on their choice and of the interplay of design, accident and character that shape their implementation. Last but not least, it is a study of the ways in which our society – the liquid modern, individualized society of consumers – influences (but does not determine) the way we construct and narrate our life trajectories.

Cultural Dimensions of the User Edward Elgar Publishing

The book presents a collection of readings to reflect and develop the varied and dynamic interfaces of globalization: the global and local. The purpose is to identify how global and local dimensions intersect with cultural construction and processes of identity. How do the images around us challenge us in everyday life? We are surrounded by a multitude of images in cultural contexts, with rich semiotic signs and symbols, manifest in posters, graffiti, advertising, the media, photographs, religious representation, sculpture, and myriad art forms. In the context of this assortment of representations, we explore visual sociological threads and constructs that emerge from issues evoked by modern ideas about globalization. This important contemporary theme is moved by the parameters of visual sociology, whereby photographic images in various contexts illustrate, reflect, and generate sociological concepts and theories. The collected writings point to a global stage, as we are guided through lands such as Australia, Britain, Canada, Egypt, France, Italy, and Lithuania, in the quest to understand globalization through prisms such as community, class, gender, ethnicity, and religious background. The book addresses the role of visual communication in an examination of these various theoretical facets, and explores ways in which individuals and institutions exchange information about themselves, their identities, their values, and their ideas of belongingness in the varied guises of culture.

Nowadays, emancipation evokes scenarios of an acquired freedom, and is closely linked to autonomy. Emancipation as liberation and freedom imposes a reflection on the conditions in which we live, as well as a question concerning what people can free themselves from and what is not possible to liberate oneself from. This collection investigates the possibility of relating to emancipation through the eyes of the ethicist. What does emancipation mean in the contemporary moral and political landscape? How is emancipation possible, and from and towards what can humankind aspire to emancipate? Which are the unattended promises of emancipation? Where, when, and to whom can one speak of emancipation? Assuming a clear ethical and moral standpoint, the contributions collected here reply to such questions, firstly by re-semantising this word and then by re-placing it within different philosophical traditions.

COVID-19: Individual Rights and Community Responsibilities provides critical insights into the tensions between individual rights and community responsibilities during the COVID-19 pandemic. Questions about mandates, lockdowns, priorities, and broader questions related to neighborly responsibilities and human rights have been central to debates about how to confront the pandemic. The scholarship presented in this volume adds to those debates by confronting such issues as the role of social media in spreading misinformation, mask mandates, pandemic politics, and the very ethos of what is meant by human and individual rights. Drawing on the expertise of scholars from around the world, the work presented here represents a remarkable diversity and quality of impassioned scholarship on the impact of COVID-19 and is a timely and critical advance in knowledge related to the pandemic.

"Livable Proximity is a passionate and compelling call for a remaking of the city under a novel paradigm of relationality and care by one of the most accomplished design thinkers of our time." - ARTURO ESCOBAR This book is a contribution to the social conversation on the city and its future. It focuses on an idea that has been in circulation for some time and that, in recent years, has received greater attention: that of a city in which everything that is needed for daily life is just a few minutes away by foot from where people live. In addition, it speaks of a city in which this functional proximity corresponds to a relational proximity, thanks to which people have more opportunities to encounter each other, support each other, care for each other and the environment, and collaborate to reach goals together. Ultimately, it is a city built starting from the life of the citizens and an idea of livable proximity in which they can find what they need to live, and to do so together with others. The underlying theme that this book poses is thus the following: can we construct the contemporary city starting from a new idea of proximity? The response given is yes, it can be done. The social innovations of the last 20 years in fact indicate where to start. Many cities in the world, including Paris, Barcelona, and Milan have made a commitment and are taking steps in this direction, offering concrete examples of what this city of proximity could be: a city in which social innovation, care, common goods, communities of place, and enabling digital platforms become the keywords of a new and widespread social capacity to design.
