Author Biography: Nana Yaw Oppong has worked in varied private sector organisations in administration and human resource roles, both in Ghana and the UK. He has also taught in higher and further education institutions in Ghana, UK and Germany. His experience from years of producing and managing varied business letters has encouraged him to put together this book as a resource for learners and practitioners. Nana holds PhD in talent management and development from the Leeds Business School, UK after his MBA from the East London Business School, UK and a BA and Diploma in Education from the University of Cape Coast, Ghana. He is currently a senior lecturer in Human Resource Management in the School of Business of the University of Cape Coast, Ghana. He also teaches Industrial Relations; Executive Secretarial Practice; and Organisational Behaviour. His research interests include cross-cultural HRM practices; talent management and development; and indigenous methods of developing employees, with publications covering these areas, and has also shared knowledge in these area through conference presentations in Ghana, Greece, United Kingdom, Germany, Australia and Hong Kong. He is as well a consultant in human resource management and development. Book Description: Writing business letters is one of the few most frequently performed administrative (managerial) duties at our workplaces, as almost every business activity involves letter writings and/or memos. This makes it an important administrative task. Yet, in many English speaking countries, there is not much emphasis on this important subject in business studies curricula. The book is divided into seven sections. Section One considers stationery: the types and sizes of the paper and other stationery items needed to produce various business documents with special emphasis on business letters. This section also considers the appropriate methods of storage, preservation and issues of stationery items. Section Two tackles parts of a letter: the rules regarding their formation and appropriate positioning on paper, while Section Three deals with some writing rules that need to be observed to create professional and effective letters (and other business documents). Section Four takes readers through the formation of the letter, or what goes into the letter to render it effective. It also includes some letter writing habits to avoid. Section Five covers how letters are written with the help of others (subordinates), and considers manuscript writing and dictation management. Sections Six and Seven consider some specimen letters: Section Six deals with specimen letters in the areas of enquiries; orders; complaints; accounts; shipping and forwarding; packaging; and banking. Section Seven considers personnel letters (forming a bulk of the letters), covering job inquiries; advertising jobs; applications; seeking and providing references; making job offers; probation and confirmation; transfers and promotions; grievance and discipline; redundancy management; meetings; separation; request for assistance; reservation and appointment. This section also focuses on some social letters including hospitality, condolences, apology, congratulations, gratitude, and get-well messages. Together, there are 174 specimen letters. The letters come with comments on formation, content, layout, and pitfalls to avoid. The aim of providing the sample letters is for readers to receive some guidance to suit their own purposes, or to use the sample letters as guides to write their own letters.

Telling Your Story Carson-Dellosa Publishing

This comprehensive study by leading scholars in an important new field—the history of letters and letter writing—is essential reading for anyone interested in nineteenth-century American politics, history or literature. Because of its mass literacy, population mobility, and extensive postal system, nineteenth-century America is a crucial site for the exploration of letters and their meanings, whether they be written by presidents and statesmen, scientists and philosophers, novelists and poets, feminists and reformers, immigrants, Native Americans, or African Americans. This book breaks new ground by mapping the voluminous correspondence of these figures and other important American writers and thinkers. Rather than treating the letter as a spontaneous private document, the contributors understand it as a self-conscious artefact, circulating between friends and strangers and across multiple genres in ways that both make and break social ties.

"This remarkable book is a testament to teachers who not only respect and advocate for children on a daily basis but who are the necessary guardians of the spirit. Every citizen who cares about the future of our children ought to read this."—Eric Carle, author of The Very Hungry Caterpillar and other classic works for children "Kozol's love for his students is as joyful and genuine as his critiques of the system are severe. He doesn't pull punches."—The Washington Post In these affectionate letters to Francesca, a first grade teacher at an inner-city school in Boston, Jonathan Kozol vividly describes his repeated visits to her classroom while, under Francesca's likably irreverent questioning, he also reveals his own most personal stories of the years that he has spent in public schools. Letters to a Young Teacher reignites a number of the controversial issues Jonathan has powerfully addressed in his bestselling The Shame of the Nation and On Being a Teacher: the mania of high-stakes testing that turns many classrooms into test-prep factories where spontaneity and critical intelligence are no longer valued, the invasion of our public schools by predatory private corporations, and the inequalities of urban schools that are once again almost as segregated as they were a century ago. But most of all, these letters are rich with the happiness of teaching children, the curiosity and jubilant excitement children bring into the classroom at an early age, and their ability to overcome their insecurities when they are in the hands of an adoring and hard-working teacher.

Excerpt from Twenty Lessons in Letter Writing and Business Forms: For Schools and Private Study Some successful teachers have placed this outline in the hands of each pupil as he enters school and have required from him the completion of the work of either one or two lessons per week, a stated time being set apart for the collection of the letters and papers and any general instruction deemed necessary, special assistance to the individual being given at any time when requested or found necessary. In this way all the pupils are properly cared for, and the instruction comes with an orderly sequence. The book outlines a definite course that has a beginning and an end. By following such a plan the progress of the pupil can be judged, and indeed, it seems but fair to the pupil to permit him to see a definite end to his course. When completed, as any other study, proper grades or credits can be given therefor. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
