En pleine République de Begou, un jeune magistrat s'oppose à la corruption. Nous sommes dans un État moderne au XXIe siècle, en Afrique : la République de Begou. Le pouvoir exécutif est aux mains des Gounda qui veulent imposer leur loi face aux Bounda qui occupent les hauts postes de la Justice du pays. Derlesi est un jeune magistrat Bounda. C'est un homme droit et juste qui, face à la corruption, va sans cesse s'opposer au pouvoir en place. Son ascension promet d'être fulgurante, mais pourra-t-il échapper aux dangereux ennemis qu'il se fait en voulant défendre la Justice ? Djimrabaye Bourngar publie à La Compagnie Littéraire son deuxième roman, après L'insoumis de Mopassa. Il y aborde avec force et humour les problèmes endémiques d'un pays qu'il aime et qu'il souhaite voir sortir de l'impasse pour devenir une vraie nation. Immergez-vous, dans ce roman, en plein coeur d'une Afrique imaginaire, mais peut-être pas si éloignée de la réalité... EXTRAIT — Son excellence, nous sommes très conscients de cette situation. Nous nous y attelons et nous allons sévir pour servir d'exemple. Notre objectif le plus pressant est de décapiter au plus vite ce groupuscule de Bounda opérant sous le label de syndicat. Nous avons arrêté un plan, avec le président de la Cour de cassation, pour casser le cou à son très zélé président. Ce bâtard de Bounda a osé déclarer sur les ondes des médias que « la liberté est assassinée à Begou ». C'est une très grave déclaration et une faute très lourde pouvant entraîner sa radiation de la magistrature. Pire c'est une atteinte à la sécurité intérieure de la Nation ! Le statut de la magistrature interdit clairement à tout magistrat toute délibération et toute déclaration politique publique. Qu'est-ce qu'un magistrat qui défend les arriérés de salaires a à voir avec la liberté, un thème purement politique ? Où est le devoir de réserve ? En tout cas, il va sentir notre foudre juridique ! — Convoquez rapidement une session de conseil de discipline et cassez-moi le cou à ce petit usurpateur de président ! On verra bien qui de lui ou de moi est président à Begou ! Plus aucun conseiller ne percevra de pécule ici tant que ce garçon n'est pas radié de la magistrature ! Relevez-moi l'identité de ceux d'entre vous qui voteraient contre la radiation de ce morpion. On ne marche pas impunément sur les couilles ! — Son excellence, le grand danger est que ces apatrides Bounda sont parvenus à contaminer nos jeunes Gounda qui les suivent bêtement comme des moutons dans cette subversion ! — Pas de pitié pour les traîtres ! Vous devez leur rappeler leur passé, s'ils ont perdu la mémoire ! Quelle ingratitude ! À PROPOS DE L'AUTEUR Djimrabaye Bourngar a assumé différentes fonctions dont juge au siège au Tribunal de Première Instance de N'Djamena puis premier substitut du Procureur de la République près cette même juridiction. Il sera détaché auprès des Missions des Nations Unies au Tchad, au Cameroun, au Nigéria et au Mali successivement comme spécialiste des affaires judiciaires et comme observateur civil, chargé des affaires politiques. L'auteur est actuellement Directeur Général (Secrétaire Général) du Ministère de la Justice et des Droits Humains.

Catalogue of the Icelandic Collection Bequeathed by Willard Fiske La Compagnie Littéraire Particularly in the humanities and social sciences, festschrifts are a popular forum for discussion. The IJBF provides quick and easy general access to these important resources for scholars and students. The festschrifts are located in state and regional libraries and their bibliographic details are recorded. Since 1983, more than 639,000 articles from more than 29,500 festschrifts, published between 1977 and 2010, have been catalogued. Le droit dans la saga Le Seigneur des Anneaux LexisNexis

The aftermath of the Great War brought the most troubled peacetime the world had ever seen. Survivors of the war were not only the soldiers who fought, the wounded in mind and body. They were also the stateless, the children who suffered war's consequences, and later the victims of the great Russian famine of 1921 to 1923. Before the phrases 'universal human rights' and 'non-governmental organization' even existed, five remarkable men and women - René Cassin and Albert Thomas from France, Fridtjof Nansen from Norway, Herbert Hoover from the US and Eglantyne Jebb from Britain - understood that a new type of transnational organization was needed to face problems that respected no national boundaries or rivalries. Bruno Cabanes, a pioneer in the study of the aftermath of war, shows, through his vivid and revelatory history of individuals, organizations, and nations in crisis, how and when the right to human dignity first became inalienable.

Assigned to Hope Nation while recovering from injuries, Captain Nicholas Seafort is appointed liaison to the wealthy planters whose holdings are vital to the Earth-Hope Nation relationship. But he's soon a pawn in a dangerous game when the planters, who fear that Earth has abandoned them to an alien attack, rebel, declaring their independence.

A Landscape of Contemporary Theories of International Law Presses Paris Sorbonne
Publié chaque année depuis 23 ans, le DAUH est la mémoire du droit de l'aménagement, de l'urbanisme et de l'habitat. Seul inventaire annuel commenté des évolutions législatives, réglementaires, jurisprudentielles et doctrinales de l'année échuë, le DAUH constitue un recueil incontournable pour maîtriser l'actualité en la matière. Ainsi, comme les précédentes, cette 23e édition est structurée en trois parties : - la première partie comporte un dossier consacré à la loi n° 2018-1021 du 23 novembre 2018 portant évolution du logement, de l'aménagement et du numérique (loi Elan) ; - la deuxième partie de l'ouvrage rend compte de la publication et de l'évolution des textes officiels, de la jurisprudence, de la doctrine et de la pratique au cours de l'année écoulée au travers de 13 chroniques thématiques : administration et acteurs, aménagement du territoire, planification et règles d'urbanisme, protection de la nature et de l'environnement, patrimoine culturel immobilier, expropriation et préemption, fiscalité et participations, opérations d'aménagement, autorisations d'urbanisme, contentieux, habitat et politique de la ville, Outre-mer ; - enfin, la troisième partie, consacrée aux différents droits de l'urbanisme étrangers, comporte une étude sur le droit du paysage en Corée. Ouvrage indispensable aux juristes et aux professionnels de l'urbanisme et de l'aménagement, le DAUH 2019 constitue un outil précieux et opérationnel pour comprendre les mutations que connaissent ces deux matières depuis plusieurs années.

If you have tattoos, who owns the rights to the imagery inked on your body? What about the photos you just shared on Instagram? And what if you are an artist, responding to the surrounding landscape of preexisting cultural forms? Most people go about their days without thinking much about intellectual property, but it shapes all aspects of contemporary life. It is a constantly moving target, articulated through a web of laws that are different from country to country, sometimes contradictory, often contested. Some protections are necessary—not only to benefit creators and inventors but also to support activities that contribute to the culture at large—yet overly broad ownership rights stifle innovation. Is It Ours? takes a fresh look at issues of artistic expression and creative protection as they relate to contemporary law. Exploring intellectual property, particularly copyrights, Martha Buskirk draws connections between current challenges and early debates about how something intangible could be defined as property. She examines bonds between artist and artwork, including the ways that artists or their heirs retain control over time. The text engages with fundamental questions about the interplay between authorship and ownership and the degree to which all expressions and inventions develop in response to innovations by others. Most importantly, this book argues for the necessity of sustaining a vital cultural commons.

What impact has the evolution and proliferation of surveillance in the digital age had on fundamental rights? This important collection offers a critical assessment from a European, transatlantic and global perspective. It tracks four key dimensions: digitalisation, privatisation, de-politicisation/de-legalisation and globalisation. It sets out the legal and policy demands that recourse to 'the digital' has imposed. Exploring the question across key sectors, it looks at privatisation through the prism of those demands on the private sector to co-operate with the state's security needs. It goes on to assess de-politicisation and de-legalisation, reflecting the fact that surveillance is often conducted in secret. Finally, it looks at applicable law in a globalised digital world. The book, with its exploration of cutting-edge issues, makes a significant contribution to our understanding of privacy in this new digital landscape.

Disputes lie at the heart of the sagas. Consequently, literary texts have been treated as sources of legal practice - narrations of law - while the sagas themselves and the handling of legal matters by the figures adhere to 'laws of narration'. The volume addresses this intricate relationship between literature and social practice from the perspective of historians as well as philologists. The contributions focus not only on disputes and their solution in saga literature, but also on the representation of law and its history in sagas and Latin historiography from Scandinavia as well as the representation of laws and norms in mythological texts. They demonstrate that narrations of law provide an indispensable insight into legal culture and its connection to a wider framework of social norms, adjusting the impression given by the laws. The philological approaches underline that the narrative texts also have an agenda of their own when it comes to their representation of law, providing a mirror of conduct, criticising inequity, reinforcing the political and juridical position of kings or negotiating norms in mythological texts. Altogether, the volume underlines the unifying force exerted by a common fiction of law beyond its letter.

Over the past twenty years, DNA ancestry testing has morphed from a niche market into a booming international industry that encourages members of the public to answer difficult questions about their identity by looking to the genome. At a time of intensified interest in issues of race and racism, the burgeoning influence of corporations like AncestryDNA and 23andMe has sparked debates about the commodification of identity, the antiracist potential of genetic science, and the promises and pitfalls of using DNA as a source of "objective" knowledge about the past. This book&8239;engages these debates by looking at the ways genomic ancestry testing has been used in Brazil and the United States to address the histories and legacies of slavery, from personal genealogical projects to collective racial politics. Reckoning with the struggles of science versus capitalism, "race-blind" versus "race-positive" public policies, and identity fluidity versus embodied experiences of racism, Permanent Markers seeks to explain why societies that have broadly embraced the social construction of race continue to search for, and find, evidence that our bodies are indelibly marked by the past.

In The Church in Fourteenth-Century Iceland, Erika Sigurdson provides a history of the fourteenth-century Icelandic Church with a focus on the the social status of elite clerics following the introduction of benefices to Iceland. In this period, the elite clergy developed a shared identity based in part on universal clerical values, but also on a shared sense of interdependence, personal networks and connections within the framework of the Church. The Church in Fourteenth-Century Iceland examines the development of this social group through an analysis of bishops' sagas, annals, and documents. In the process, it chronicles major developments in the Icelandic Church after the reforms of the late thirteenth century, including its emphasis on property and land ownership, and the growth of ecclesiastical bureaucracy.

How the ghost stories of pagan times reveal the seamless union existing between the world of the living and the afterlife • Demonstrates how Medieval Christianity transformed the more corporeal ghost encountered in pagan cultures with the disembodied form known today • Explains how the returning dead were once viewed as either troublemakers or guarantors of the social order The impermeable border the modern world sees existing between the world of the living and the afterlife was not visible to our ancestors. The dead could--and did--cross back and forth at will. The pagan mind had no fear of death, but some of the dead were definitely to be dreaded: those who failed to go peacefully into the afterlife but remained on this side in order to right a wrong that had befallen them personally or to ensure that the law promoted by the ancestors was being respected. But these dead individuals were a far cry from the amorphous ectoplasm that is featured in modern ghost stories. These earlier visitors from beyond the grave--known as revenants--slept, ate, and fought like men, even when, like Klaufi of the Svarfdaela Saga, they carried their heads in their arms. Revenants were part of the ancestor worship prevalent in the pagan world and still practiced in indigenous cultures such as the Fang and Kota of equatorial Africa, among others. The Church, eager to supplant this familial faith with its own, engineered the transformation of the corporeal revenant into the disembodied ghost of modern times, which could then be easily discounted as a figment of the imagination or the work of the devil. The sanctified grounds of the church cemetery replaced the burial mounds on the family farm, where the ancestors remained as an integral part of the living community. This exile to the formal graveyard, ironically enough, has contributed to the great loss of the sacred that characterizes the modern world.

This rich and remarkable volume offers an overview of the most important schools, movements and trends which make up the theoretical landscape of contemporary international law, as well as the works of over 500 authors. It moves beyond generalization and examines how the relevant literature deals with the basic issues of the international legal system, such as international obligations, legitimacy, compliance, unity and universality, the rule of law, human rights, use of force and economics. It offers insights into the addressees (the state, international organizations, individuals and other private persons), and the construction of international law, including law-making, the relationship between norms, and interpretation. Moreover, it widens the discourse by addressing old, yet enduring, as well as new concerns about the functioning of the international legal system, and presents views of non-international lawyers and political scientists regarding that system. It is a valuable analysis for researchers, students, and practitioners.

Cinema has been long associated with France, dating back to 1895, when Louis and Auguste Lumi_re screened their works, the first public viewing of films anywhere. Early silent pioneers Georges MZli_s, Alice Guy BlachZ and others followed in the footsteps of the Lumi_re brothers and the tradition of important filmmaking continued throughout the 20th century and beyond. In Encyclopedia of French Film Directors, Philippe Rège identifies every French director who has made at least one feature film since 1895. From undisputed masters to obscure one-timers, nearly 3,000 directors are cited here, including at least 200 filmmakers not mentioned in similar books published in France. Each director's entry contains a brief biographical summary, including dates and places of birth and death; information on the individual's education and professional training; and other pertinent details, such as real names (when the filmmaker uses a pseudonym). The entries also provide complete filmographies, including credits for feature films, shorts, documentaries, and television work. Some of the most important names in the history of film can be found in this encyclopedia, from masters of the Golden Age_Jean Renoir and RenZ Clair_to French New Wave artists such as Fran_ois Truffaut and Jean-Luc Godard.

This book successfully represents the indispensable interdisciplinarity of viewpoints by its authors combining legal perspectives with architectural and anthropological approaches. With the observation and analysis presented here, this book is the first to demonstrate research-based governance solutions for cultural heritage within the process of recovering from traumatic events. Its opening statement is that universal international standards are not effective enough for the specific situations of disaster-struck places. A major objective of this monograph is to allow its readers to go through a learning experience, from plural cases where reconstruction of cultural heritage became central to rebuilding a post-disaster society. This book introduces Japan as the most disaster-prone country, with a long history of confronting and overcoming the power of nature, resulting in its unique solutions for cultural heritage resilience and sustainability. But how do leadership and decision making become efficient in times of recovery? Bearing in mind what may be lacking in Japanese practices, this work also presents comparable governance models from other countries which indicate alternative solutions. While a traumatic event may occur within one night, the process of recovery could last for decades. Such disasters also tend to recur. In order that directly affected communities can sustain resilience throughout the long recovery period, and that equally severe social trauma will not be repeated, a continuous, well-maintained governance response is required, whether grounded in local knowledge or national policy frameworks. At the heart of this book is the matter of the reconstruction process involving networks of small and large communities. Each of those has a role that becomes operational through linkages of contacts, the interchange of knowledge and skills, and above all through the sharing of common goals.
