behind kiln formed glass is that art objects can be created by melting glass in a kiln. Glass is heat-processed in a kiln at temperatures ranging from 1200 degrees to over 1900 degrees. Two or more pieces of glass are placed in the kiln and heated until they fuse together into a single piece. Linda Hoschler Glass - Kiln formed glass After all the layers of glass powder have been applied, the piece is heated in a kiln to approximately 1500 degrees. Depending on what a piece will become, whether it be a bowl, a sculpture, or a narrative piece, one or two more trips in the kiln are required.
