Excerpt from A Grammar of the Urdu or Hindustani Language In this work I have availed myself of the labours of my predecessors, and I fully recognize my Obligations; but with their rules I have embodied the results of my own study and observation. In a few instances I have ventured to differ from those who have gone before me, but more has been done [I]. The way of addition and classification, and in the drawing of distinctions. Many things have been noticed which hitherto have been passed over unperceived, or as being, perhaps, as Forbes says, plain and self-evident. I have not allowed this last consideration to weigh with me; what is plain and self-evident to one student may not be so to another; and it is hardly competent for one who knows the language to determine what points are so clear and manifest that no student will ever require to be told them. It may be impossible to produce a perfect Grammar; but the smallest matters should be included in it, as well as the greatest.
