 The Naked Lunch has very sharp teeth indeed. It's supposed to be an adaptation from a William Burrough's book, which doesn't make sense anyway. It starts as the story of a failed writer whose wife becomes addicted to an insecticide powder... It goes downhill after this relatively sane and normal beginning.
 Naked Lunch (1991) - IMDb
 Naked Lunch is a non-linear narrative without a clear plot. The following is a summary of some of the events in the book that could be considered the most relevant. The book begins with the adventures of William Lee (also known as "Lee the Agent"), who is Burroughs' alter ego in the novel.
 Naked Lunch - Wikipedia
 Naked Lunch was a work of art put into words.

And the good thing about art is that its objective. It doesn't have to make sense it just is what it is. He seemed to be a very sick man mentally as well as being spun out of his mind when writing Naked Lunch.
