Here are 80 articles on mythologies from around the world, including Native Americans, African, Celtic, Norse, and Slavic, and about such topics as fire, the cosmos, and creation. Also includes an overview of the Indo-Europeans and an essay on the religions and myths of Armenia. Illustrations.

La sculpture d'époque romaine dans le nord, dans l'est des Gaules et dans les régions avoisinantes New York : B. Franklin Situates the study of Roman sculpture within the fields of art history, classical archaeology, and Roman studies, presenting technical, scientific, literary, and theoretical approaches.

Jules Breton, Painter of Peasant Life Oxford University Press, USA

Jules Breton (1827-1906), known as one of the first 'peasant painters', created beautiful scenes of rural French life and was a highly popular figure among the Salon artists of his era. Taking his inspiration from his native Artois and from the landscapes of Brittany, where he stayed for long periods, he painted peasant women and men performing their daily activities, meticulously observing their world and making it a place of peace and harmony. During the second half of the nineteenth century, rewards and official decorations were heaped upon him, and his paintings were purchased not only by the emperor but also by collectors in America, Britain and Ireland. However, Breton's work became eclipsed by the avant-garde movements of the twentieth century, and he was eventually forgotten. This book now pays Breton the tribute that he deserves. It traces the development of his career and the forces that influenced him from his childhood through his early training in Belgium and Paris to his years in Brittany. The book presents and discusses a number of important paintings by Breton, some of which have been almost unknown until now, and it shows how they reflect the artist's social and humanitarian concerns as well as his painterly abilities.

Rome au siècle d'Auguste, ou, voyage d'un Gaulois London ; New York : Gordon & Cremonesi

This dictionary, with more than 1000 articles, provides a comprehensive survey of all important aspects of Celtic religion and culture, covering both the prehistoric continental Celts and the later, medieval culture that found written form long after the Celts had settled in the British Isles. Articles in the dictionary also cover the interaction between Celtic and Roman civilisations, and the seminal input of medieval Celtic legend into the Arthurian tradition. The continental and insular Celtic languages, both ancient and modern, are described, and there is a full account of the Celtic deities known to us from the inscriptions and iconography of the classical world. Celtic art and agriculture, the Ossian myth, the Irish Renaissance, and the history of Celtic studies are among other areas treated in depth.

Como arqueólogos dependemos de la cultura material para reconstruir el pasado, pero cuanto más evidente es esta necesidad de conocer cada una de las categorías materiales, menos frecuentes son los estudios sistemáticos que se propongan analizar determinadas categorías. Hemos querido ocuparnos en este libro de los broches de cinturón de garfios con decoración prevista en el molde a partir de un catálogo exhaustivo y una metodología renovada. Estos elementos nos han interesado por su cronología, entre el s. vii y el vi a.C., y su distribución, por la mayor parte de la Península Ibérica y el Sur de Francia. Pero sabedores de que la tipología per se es un ejercicio incompleto, también se han analizado aspectos sociales y de género, al tiempo que se discuten cómo fueron adoptadas las técnicas y modas que los crearon. Presentamos un trabajo anómalo, pero se trata de una anomalía necesaria, un intento de giro de timón con un cuádruple objetivo: Arqueológico, en tanto que metodológicamente basado en el estudio de las evidencias materiales; Histórico, al orientar las conclusiones hacia la explicación de los materiales en sus contextos; Didáctico, por presentar los detalles del proceso de estudio; y Patrimonial, en tanto que preocupado por facilitar un instrumento que facilite la comprensión y (re-)contextualización (cronológica y espacial) de piezas de muy variada procedencia, desde fondos de museos sin contexto a depósitos arqueológicos fiables, sin que falten algunas del mercado anticuario y de colecciones privadas. Como verá el lector, más allá de reivindicar la importancia de la tipología, el trabajo presenta y revaloriza los broches de cinturón de garfios por ser la primera categoría metálica hispana que se distribuyó de manera transcultural; por ser un elemento que aparece ex-novo en clara relación con dinámicas de interacción indígena y no mediterránea, lo cual sirve como contrapunto y estímulo para la identificación de dinámicas artesanales locales y foráneas; por la posibilidad de revisar de manera precisa su cronología y así discutir comportamientos y modas cambiantes según comunidades y áreas culturales; y para probar el método de estudio antes de desarrollarlo con el catálogo y análisis del resto de tipos de broches de cinturón de garfios.

The ancient Celtic world evokes debate, discussion, romanticism and mythicism. On the one hand it represents a specialist area of archaeological interest, on the other, it has a wide general appeal. The Celtic world is accessible through archaeology, history, linguistics and art history. Of these disciplines, art history offers the most direct message to a wider audience. This volume of 37 papers brings together a truly international group of pre-eminent specialists in the field of Celtic art and Celtic studies. It is a benchmark volume the like of which has not been seen since the publication of Paul Jacobsthal's Early Celtic Art in 1944. The papers chart the history of attempts to understand Celtic art and argue for novel approaches in discussions spanning the whole of Continental Europe and the British Isles. This new body of international scholarship will give the reader a sense of the richness of the material and current debates. Artefacts of rich form and decoration, which we might call art, provide a most sensitive set of indicators of key areas of past societies, their power, politics and transformations. With its broad geographical scope, this volume offers a timely opportunity to re-assess contacts, context, transmission and meaning in Celtic art for understanding the development of European cultures, identities and economies in pre- and proto-history.

In Greek mythology, Hyperboreans were a tribe who lived far to Greece's north. Contained in what has come down to us of Greek literary tradition are texts that identify the Hyperboreans with the Celts, or Hyperborean lands with Celtic ones. This groundbreaking book studies the texts that make or imply this identification, and provides reasons why some ancient Greek authors identified a mythical people with an actual one. Timothy P. Bridgman demonstrates not only that these authors mythologize history, but that they used the traditional Greek parallel mythical world to interpret history throughout ancient Greek culture, thought and literature.

In English-speaking countries, Francophone comic strips like Hergés's Les Aventures de Tin Tin and Goscinny and Uderzo's Les Aventures d'Asterix are viewed—and marketed—as children's literature. But in Belgium and France, their respective countries of origin, such strips—known as bandes dessinées—are considered a genuine art form, or, more specifically, "the ninth art." But what accounts for the drastic difference in the way such comics are received? In Masters of the Ninth Art, Matthew Screech explores that difference in the reception and reputation of bandes dessinées. Along with in-depth looks at Tin Tin and Asterix, Screech considers other major comics artists such as Jacques Tardi, Jean Giraud, and Moebius, assessing in the process their role in Francophone literary and artistic culture. Illustrated with images from the artists discussed, Masters of the Ninth Art will appeal to students of European popular culture, literature, and graphic art.
